Military Veterans bring experience and skills of great value to the workforce. This publication describes services that help Veterans with a disability enter the workforce and find fulfilling employment. Some of the services are open only to Veterans but many are available to any American with a disability.

To learn about the many Social Security programs and services available to support Veterans and Wounded Warriors, go to the Social Security Veterans page at

Most importantly, if your agency works with Veterans and are interested in receiving some in-service training on the Social Security programs and services for Veterans, please contact Vonda VanTil at vonda.vantil@ssa.gov.

JOB ACCOMMODATIONS

By: Hillary Kanady, Area Work Incentive Coordinator

Did you know that people with disabilities who have disclosed their disability to their employer are ensured reasonable accommodations by their employers under Title I of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)? “Reasonable accommodations” means adapting the job site or job functions for a qualified person with a disability to enable the individual to enjoy equal employment opportunities.

An employer can modify the work site or the job itself; both are considered accommodations. Examples of accommodations an employer might make include allowing flexible work schedules, acquiring or modifying equipment and making existing facilities accessible.

Job accommodations can vary from employer to employer and individual to individual. If help is needed in determining how to discuss and receive job accommodations, consider these resource links from SSA’s Choose Work website:

- Service Providers– many Employment Networks (ENs) and Vocational Rehabilitation agencies (VRs) offer assistance in requesting and arranging job accommodations with an employer.
- Job Accommodations Network \(JAN\) – JAN is an organization that offers consultation and support in arranging job accommodations between employers and employees.
- ADA’s Guide to Employment – learn more about the benefits, support, and protections offered by the Americans with Disabilities Act.
- PABSS – Protection and Advocacy for Beneficiaries of Social Security organizations may represent eligible beneficiaries to remove barriers precluding successful employment including understanding and protecting rights, responsibilities, and reasonable accommodations under the Americans with Disabilities Act

Beneficiaries can get connected with job search resources and special hiring programs for individuals with disabilities through the Ticket to Work program. The Ticket program service provider can give beneficiaries the support needed to make the job search a success! To get started visit www.choosework.net or call the Ticket to Work Help Line at 1-866-968-7842 where experts are available Monday – Friday, 8 AM – 8 PM EST.

National Cancer Survivors Day

In 2017, more than a million people will be diagnosed with cancer around the world. This alarming statistic affects people and families everywhere. Chances are you know someone affected by this terrible disease.

On June 4, we observe National Cancer Survivors Day in the United States. In support of this day, Social Security encourages getting checkups to provide early detection, raise awareness through education, and recognize the survivors who have gone through this battle or are still living with the disease.

Social Security stands strong in our support of the fight against cancer. We offer services to patients dealing with this disease through our disability insurance program and our Compassionate Allowances program. Compassionate Allowances are cases with medical conditions so severe they obviously meet

Social Security's disability standards, allowing us to process the cases quickly with minimal medical information. Many cancers are part of our Compassionate Allowances list.

There's no special application or form you need to submit for Compassionate Allowances. Simply apply for disability benefits online, in-person or over the phone. Once we identify you as having a Compassionate Allowances condition, we'll expedite your disability application.

Social Security establishes Compassionate Allowances conditions using information received at public outreach hearings, from our employees, who review millions of disability cases each year, from medical and scientific experts, and from data based on our research. For more information about Compassionate Allowances, including the list of eligible conditions, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.
